

CANADIAN REPORT:

01-13-2020 - Crude oil and refined products futures were softer early Monday amid eased U.S.-Iran tensions and ahead of the U.S. and China signing an agreement for the first phase of their trade deal.

West Texas Intermediate and Brent crude futures were a dime or less off their Friday settlements, at around $59 and $65, respectively. Overnight trading ranges were narrow at less than 75cts/bbl. Globex action in gasoline and ultra-low-sulfur diesel futures was also tame, with front-month contracts close to overnight lows seen in ranges spanning 1.5-2.0cts/gal.

The complex as a whole concluded Friday at lower levels, breaking the previous five-week stretch of week-on-week gains. Price moves in the previous session were light compared to preceding days, with the crude market appearing to search out a bottom.

Commerzbank today noted comments from IEA Executive Director Fatih Birol that he expected global oil demand to grow by a bit more than 1 million b/d this year and that the implied supply surplus on the oil market would be on a similar scale.

The German bank will be watching this week's release of monthly reports by IEA, EIA and OPEC for confirmation of that projection.

"From a purely fundamental perspective, in other words, the oil price should be lower than it is at present" bank analysts said in the research note.

At 7:06 a.m. ET, February West Texas Intermediate was trading a penny lower at $59.03/bbl, while March Brent was down 16cts to $64.82/bbl.

February ULSD was trading 12pts higher at $1.9296/gal after touching an overnight high of $1.94/gal. February RBOB was down 46 pts at $1.6550/gal, having reached a low of $1.6477 overnight.

CASH MARKET OVERVIEW . . .

U.S. spot refined product prices put in a mixed performance Friday, climbing in almost all bulk gasoline markets and mostly falling in diesel markets. The cash price moves were directionally consistent with underlying futures contracts which rose in the case of RBOB and fell for ULSD.

Front-month RBOB futures picked up 69pts (to $1.6596/gal) and February ULSD floundered by 2.17cts (to $1.9284/gal). Diesel's drop on NYMEX - accentuated by selling late Friday on forecasts for unseasonably warm weekend temperatures along much of the East Coast - capped a five-session run of declines to end at the lowest level seen since Dec. 4.

A comparison of weekly averages so far in January shows bulk market diesel and gasoline prices softer in most cases. The exceptions were Chicago ULSD, where the averages were virtually the same at a little over $1.79/gal, and CARBOB averages in California which strengthened.

The average for Los Angeles CARBOB was almost 10cts/gal higher (at $1.8623) week on week, and San Francisco CARBOB's weekly average was almost 4cts/gal higher at $1.7060 versus the average for the week ended Jan. 3.

Trading values in bulk diesel markets Friday strengthened across West Coast locations, while weakening in eastern markets.

The downshifts east of the Rockies, combined with ULSD futures' slide, implied outright price declines of well more than 2cts/gal in the Northeast, Gulf Coast and Midwest Group 3 markets. Chicago was the outlier, falling only 17pts thanks to a 2cts/gal contraction in its very wide basis discount.

On the other hand, San Francisco CARB diesel basis strengthened by 6cts/gal after a late spurt of buying interest had the product trading at 8cts under the screen. The move took the outright price almost 4cts/gal higher on the day.

Los Angeles CARB diesel's premium to February ULSD futures firmed by 25pts to plus 2.75cts/gal, and Pacific Northwest spot ULSD's basis discount shrank by 3cts following a trade at 7cts/gal under the pricing benchmark which was good for almost a penny increase in the outright price.

Spot gasoline prices east of the Rockies referencing February RBOB on Friday tracked its increase except in Chicago, where both CBOB and RBOB discounts widened enough to offset futures' lift. CBOB's trading value slipped by almost a penny to reach 8cts under the screen while the Chicago RBOB discount more than doubled to minus 6.50cts, which implied a cash price decline of almost 3cts/gal on the day.

Basis discounts for Gulf Coast spot gasoline products narrowed, by half a cent for CBOB (good for more than a penny increase in the outright price) and by three quarters of a cent for RBOB which tacked on a day's gain of almost 1.5cts to the cash price.

West Coast spot gasoline prices rose in tandem with February RBOB on NYMEX. CARBOB premiums were steady at 19.50cts in Los Angeles and 5.50cts in San Francisco, and the penny premium for Pacific Northwest sub-octane was unchanged on the day.

The average retail price of regular U.S. gasoline shifted lower by 1.4cts over the weekend to $2.581/gal, according to AAA. The level was just three tenths of a cent lower compared to a week ago but higher by 1.5cts versus the same time last month. The U.S. average has extended into 2020 the previous quarter's trend of double-digit surpluses to prices seen one year earlier, a spread which now stands at 33.6cts/gal (versus $2.245/gal).
